June 14, 2007

In today's world of political correctness, it is easy to believe that we have overcome the discrimination that defined previous generations. While our nation has made great strides towards acceptance of others, instances remain where qualified people are passed over for opportunities because of their perceived disabilities.

Fortunately, individuals like Matt Lawrence are taking the initiative and assisting those who are handicapped. His website, JobEnable.com, is a valuable resource for anyone who feels they are being judged by their limitations instead of their abilities.

I commend Matt for his good work and desire to help others. Through his tireless efforts, he has proven an inspiration to others who seek nothing more than to be evaluated on an equal playing field.

Sincerely,

Kenny Marchant
Member of Congress
